Highlights from April:

Completing all my custom orders in April consumed me, but I finally finished the last week of April and shipped them all out!

I have uploaded many pictures on my Flickr page of custom orders, and I have many more to post. I now have about 1450 pictures on my Flickr page.

I found Plurk, new to me but not new, it launched on May 12, 2008 with the vision to be a balance between blogs and social networks. I like that when I post on Plurk it will also send out to Facebook, and Twitter if I set it to do that for me. That way I don't have to log in to Facebook or Twitter to make duplicate posts.

I heard about Plurk in a Pod Cast called Fiberista Files Podcast The Podcast is all about the life of a fiber artist named Heather. Check out her podcast and her shop Highland Handmades.

I finally finished my homemade rag-rug loom; I will upload pictures to my Flickr page once I have lots of weft woven into the warp. I will also post on my Ravelry page once I finish the first rug on this loom. I also made battens (swords) from wooden yardsticks.

In April I revamped many listings in my Etsy shop and I added a Shopping page on my website. I'm learning how to create PayPal button with code so that I can add the buttons to other pages to be able to offer payment throughout my website.

On my blog I added lots of new links to handcrafts, pod casts, resources, animal advocacy, sustainable living, and other interesting websites. When you visit my blog check the right sidebar to sign up to follow and scroll down to find all the many wonderful websites that I enjoy that I want to share with you all.

My absolute favorite podcast is still Yarn at Yinwoo and I finally watched all the archived episodes way back to August 2013, go watch and join her Ravelry group too!
